NAVAL RESERVE.

cial Impectors Found a Good Deal to Criticise.

Wassersonos, Oct. 7.—The naval officers who inspected the performance of the naval reserve this anomar have found a good deal to criticise in that part of the militia. The Besion reserve has received the most commendation, while the North Carolina division obtained the least. The latest report received is that of Lieut. W. H. Schuetze, who was detailed by Assistant Secretary McAdoo to inspect the work of the New York City reserve at its senson's work recently on the old New Hampshire in Coal Spring harbor. The report, among other things, says: The infantry drill measury for naval militia could be taught during the winter months and no time should be wasted on it during the necessarily short summer drills. The rewing was good, as was the practice with the one pound gun from the ship, though the inter was of no practices i value, as the gun was on a fixed plutform and the target anchored at a known range. All things considered, it is much to be regretted that these men were not permitted to spenda unch at sen in a man-of-war, where the work and experience would have been of great benefit to them. The men composing the buttalion are not scames in any sense, and would, in my opinion, be unwilling to perform man of war should an emergency require the calling out of a reserve. regency require the calling out of a

According to the inspectors there have been too many faulta, and nowhere was the naval militia found valuable enough to make it in any sense a force upon which the department might de-

SWINDLED CHICAGO PARTIES.

Carrago, Oct 7.—The Chicago police authorities are of the epinion that Stonewall J. Dufrance, who was arrested in feetroit is the man who swindled Lawyer Jacob Newman out of thousands of dollars last February.

Last February a man whose description tallies closely with that of Defrance and Elliott turned up in Chicago. He gave the name of Lyman J. Lamb. He began business with Herman Schaffner & Co. One day he presented a draft for $25,500, on which he wished several thousand dollars, advanced. The bank refused to honor the draft unless Lamb was properly identified. Attorney Newman was prevailed upon, and in the course of identification placed his name on the back of the draft. Lamb disappeared and the paper proved to be worthless. On the return of the dishonored draft Attorney Newman was comworthless. On the return of the dishon-ored draft Attorney Newman was com-pelled to settle for the amount advanced. Attorney Newman left for Detroit to-night to identify Defrance if possible.

MISSIONARY FOR 35 YEARS

Progress of the Emp

Dr. and Mrs. Dunist Mctilivary of Chieng Mai, Siam, are visiting the Rev. and Mrs. Dun F. Bradley of No. 111 North Prospect street. Mrs. Mctilivary is Mr. Bradley's cidest sister. Dr. McGilvary has spent thirty five years in the Siameso mission schools. He went east in 1858, and has continued in the work ever since. During that time he has been in America only three times, once in 1873, again in 1888, the present visit being the third. This time he came as a delegate to the world's parfitiment of religious, which met in Chicago. The ductor is a white-haired, venerable man, whose face betrays a warm, appoputable. Mrs. MctGilvary, too, has speak most of her life in the East, antile browned by the burning rays of a tropic sun. Dr. and Mrs. Duniet McGillvary of Hadn't Heard of the War.

"We left Chieng Mai in June," said the doctor to a reporter for Tax Hanashy yesterday, "and came down the Manash river to langkok just as the French were preparing to bombard the city. We had heard nothing about the trouble between the French and the Siamess, although just as we started there were a few rumors of trouble affect. There was great excitement in the city when we arrived, although the authorities were doing all they could to keep the people quiet. There was little external evidence of excitement, but the prospective bombardment was the only topic of conversation. A blockade was imminent and the king had just declared that if the river was to be blockaded that if the river was to be blockaded that if the river was to be blockaded that if the channel near the mouth of the river and room was left for only one steambout to pass through at a time.

Bitter Feeling Toward Frances "Another junk was kept in readiness to be sunk in the gap, but I believe it never was. We left the city before hostilities ceased. The effort of the king to blockade the river would have been of little use, for the French could have hittle use, for the French could have blown up the surken junks without any trouble and cleared the channel. The feeling in Siam toward foreigners has been very friendly, but I don't know how it is since this French episode. There was a great deal of bitterness manifested toward French when we were in Bangkok. The republic was regarded as a guerilla an outlaw ruth.

time. The next king was a man of fer more liberal ideas. He had been edu-cated for a Buddhist priest. He became acquainted with Mr. Bradley, the father of Mr. Bradley of this city, and also Mr. Caswell. They exercised a great influonce over him.

The Printing Press Introduced.

"Mr. Bradley introduced the first printing press in Stampand did a grand work ing press in Stampand did a grand work for the civilization of the little empire. The present king is educated and cultured. He has a ministry with whom he shares the responsibility of government, and tries to be a beneficient ruler over his people. Europeans and Americans are held in high favor and their ideas freely adopted. The condition of the common people is fair. The men can nearly all read and write. The women, however, are not so fortunate. The men, however, are not so fortunate. The system of polygamy is still in existence, and that is a curse to every nation where it has secured a foothold. One of the it has secured a roothoid. One of the wives of the pres at king is his sister. There is only one railroad in the country and that runs from Bangkok to the fort, twenty-eight miles down the river.

English capitalists are building another 172 miles into the interior."

Dr. McGilvary is well pleased with the work of the religious congress and believes that christianity has been the gainer by being compared with the other religions of the world.

EUPHRASIA

The Beautiful Legend Connected with the Dedication of St. Sophia.

A legend connected with the Church of St. Sophia is recalled by "An Idie Woman in Constantinopie," and as it contains a moral fragrant of truth it may well be held in perpetual remem-brance. When the bacilies was finished Emperor Justinian gave orgold should be piaced about the dome: "Justinian deflicates this church to the glory of God." But on the day of the public opening the emperor looked up at the dome and saw, with amesement, hat the inscription rest "Emphresis HIS SISTER IN COURT

"What is the meaning of this most cry?" he asked, pointing upward, an turning to the patriarch sitting heald the throne he said: "Did I not com-mand you to have my name engraves on the dome?"

"Who is Enghresis?" called the atriarch. "Who knows a woman saring such a name? If anyone can mower let him speak."

Prom the priests to the lowest of the assembled thousands the question. "Who is Euphrasia?" ran round the church. No one answered. At length, while the emperor sat mute and amazed, a miserable fellow who cleaned the marble floor stepped forth

'Imperial Cesar, to whom I am un-orthy to raise my eyes, I know a sman with such a name, but she is most bedridden. She lives in a little ouse near one of the walls of the

"Bring her hither," commanded the emperor, and straightway pages and chamberlains rushed out and soon respected carrying an aged woman who trembled in every limb.

"Is your name Euphrasis?" saked the emperor.

"Yes, mighty emperor, it is."

"What do you know of that inscription?" and he pointed aloft to the large letters on the wallt.

"Nothing, my lord, nothing?"

"ligt you see your name on the church. It stands there instead of mine. What have you done toward the building of the church?"

"Great king, nothing. My lord mocks his poor servant."

"Not at all," replied the emperor.

"They tell me you live near. Think! Have you done nothing, spoke nothing, thought nothing to give you this claim?"

"Majesty," she said, "there is a little act, but it is so small I am ashamed to trouble my lord with its mention." "Speak, I command you," said Jus-tinian. "Fear not. Tell me all."

Then she told how, as she lay on her bed in her little house, she heard with sorrow the travail of the oxen and mules, carrying the marble and brick and beams up the steep hill, and her heart was sore within her; and how, when she grew better, the thought

"Who knows if I cannot do some thing to ease their pain, the poor dumb beasts, so patient in their woe! At

So she took her bed and bore it into the road and seattered the straw from it on the steep ascent. It was but a fittle, but lo! as she worked, the straw seemed to grow and multiply and cover the whole road, and from that time the oxen passed pleasantly with their loads, and she heard no more distress. The tears were in Justinian's eyes, and he said in a contle voice.

and he said in a gentle voice:

"Let the name of Euphrasia stand;
she is more worthy than I, for of her little she gave all she had."

The sting of a bee is composed of two spears of polished horn held in a sheath. One gets a notion of the sharpness of the weapon by a very simple comparison. The edge of a very keen razor, when examined under a good microscope, appears as broad as the back of a thick knife, rough, uneven and full of notches. An exceed-ingly small and delicate needle simiscrutto bar from a smith's forge. The sting of a bee, viewed through the same instrument, shows a flawless polish, without the least blemish or inequali-ty, ending in a point too fine to be dis-cerned. In the act of stinging the spears, each of which has nine barbs and is grooved with a channel for the passage of the poison, emerge from the sheath. One of them is plunged into the fiesh of the victim, the other following, and alternately they penetrate deeper and deeper. The venom is forced to the ends of the spears by much the same process as that which carries the poison from the tooth of a snake when it bites.

A Queer Legal Decument. One of the most remarkable legal papers on file in the archives of the world is one now in the national mu-seum of Paris labeled "Sentence on a hog, executed by justice, in the copy-hold of Clarmont-Avin, and strangled upon a gibbet at that place." It is sealed with red wax, kept under a glass case, bears date June 14, 1491, and reads as follows: " We, the jury, in detestation and horror of this crime, and in order to make an example and so satisfy justice, have de-clared, judged, sentenced, pronounced and appointed that the said hog, now detained in the abbey as a prisoner, shall by the executioner be hung and strangled on a gibbet, near the gallows which stands within the jurisdiction of the monks whose names are hereto appended, being near the copyhold of Avin. In witness of which we have scaled this present with our scale." Following the above are the signatures of the jurors and the prefect of the department de l'Ainse.

Floyd Haynes' Case Drawing to a

WILL BE ARGUED MONDAY

Haynes Was Much Affec

Floyd Haynes was on the witness stand yesterday in Judge Adsit's court, giving testimony, when suddenly his face celered, his eyes drooped, and in a moment he was sobbing aloud, so that he was unable to proceed for several minutes. The audience did not at first resilize what had so wrought his feelings. All eyes had been directed toward the witness and few had seen a slight, girlish form step into the room with a budy in her arms and take a seat near Haynes' attorney. It was Haynes sister, whose disgrees led to the assault. Ahern partly turned away as the girl he had ruined took her chair a few feet from where he sat. There was little new testimony on the part of the defense and then several witnesses were sworn on rebuttal to prove that Ahern did not trip Haynes. The testimony is now all in and the case will be argued Monday.

Essutiful teeth are a luxury few powers.

We have heard people say they would give recrything they had for such bountiful teeth as to and so had.

The true secret is not so much in the perfectness of the teeth as in the snow like whiteness and the brilliant polisis.

All teeth are capable of this with proper care. Washes and passes should be avoided as they are injurious as are also many of the powders, a property prepared powder, however, is the only right and perfect thing to cleanse and preserve the teeth. This we have succeeded in producing after much labor land expense. The formula is by one of the most noted dentists of of this country and is absolutely perfect.

CARELESSNESS OF THE AMERICAN PEOPLE! A Trait That Is Sending Thousands of Thom to Premiature

Thousands of people right in this city are hurrying themserives to the cente-teries through carelessness. They think they have simply a had cold in the head or a sore throat when in reality they are walking about with cutarth—rest rounmessas or consumption. If they would but stop to think of the years of minery they might envo themselves they would strangle the disease in its infancy. Delay is dangerous; besides it requires a hard fight to condicate the disease from the system whom it is allowed to run. Humanity is alike the world over-people keep putting of seeing what is the matter with them, and when they might be cured for a few dollars they wait until the disease has passed beyond the skill of the physician and they fill the grave they help to sig.
